THE AUDITORIUM

THE REAL JETSETTERS | Arefa Tehsin
Some animals that travel the world with their wings and fins and feet can put our greatest travellers to shame. Want to know more about such creatures? Join in.

Andaleeb Wajid has been writing since she was ten but had to wait twenty years to be published! Her two sons do not read her books but are a constant source of inspiration.

Arefa Tehsin grew up treading jungles with her naturalist father. She was often found trying to catch a snake or spin a yarn. The Ex-Honorary Wildlife Warden, Udaipur, is the author of several books and a columnist in newspapers and magazines.

When Bijal Vachharajani is not reading Harry Potter or worrying about climate change, she can be found traipsing around the jungles of India. When you meet her, ask her why she is known as Editor Scissorhands.

Champa Saha is a teacher, special educator and counsellor who has been reading, listening to and telling stories ever since she can remember.

Fevicreate develops creative hobby ideas for children of all ages. Their aim is to use craft as a tool to make learning simpler, helping children's development in a meaningful and fun way so that they become more creative and solutions-oriented.

Gautam Benegal will probably be silently figuring out what you'd look like on paper from the moment you are introduced. He likes cartoons as well as serious stuff and has held exhibitions of his paintings in Important Sounding Places.

Kapil Pandey discovered his passion for storytelling at the grand old age of 30 when he met the Gruffalo in the deep dark wood. When not telling stories, he runs marathons and sometimes goes to work.

Lavanya Karthik has the best job in the world - writing and drawing books for children. She also eats a lot of cake and talks to street dogs... occasionally they talk back (the dogs, not the cake).

Malavika PC is an artist, illustrator and performer who lives and works from her studio in Pondicherry. She loves to draw on and with paper and is currently working on a picture book.

Neha Singh loves creating stories through books, plays and films. She believes there is a crazy story inside every person, itching to be told.

Proiti Roy, winner of the BLBA Award, illustrates for children's books. She also helps animals who are ill, hurt or in trouble. She loves to sit at her desk- illustrating, surrounded by dogs she rescued, with a hot cup of tea.

Qissago Kailash Waghmare is an actor-singer who has worked in several renowned plays and in Marathi films. He sleeps, dreams and thinks theatre.

Qissago Saattvic is an economist who works at a law firm, moonlights as an actor, starlights as a tabla player, torchlights as a playwright, candlelights as a singer and fairylights as a film-maker.

The art of Qissebaazi was invented by Danish Hussain. The award-winning actor, poet, storyteller and theatre director was also instrumental in reviving Dastangoi, the lost art form of Urdu storytelling. He runs his own theatre company The Hoshrubha Repertory in Mumbai.

Sajid Mohiuddin, who hails from the serene town of Sumbal loves to stay active at all times. An NSD-trained theatre actor and drama writer, he recreates Kashmiri folk stories through visuals and performing art.

Savio Mascarenhas is the creative mind behind Super Suppandi, the super avatar of Suppandi. He is also the artist for Little Shambu, based on the childhood adventures of Shikari Shambu.

Shabnam Minwalla was senior assistant editor with the Times of India but now has the even more brain-scrambling job of being a mother of three. When time permits, she dons her writer's hat!

Siddhant Shah, a TEDx speaker, heritage architect and accessibility consultant with UNESCO, works with museums and art galleries to bridge the gap between cultural heritage and disability, through multi-sensory experiential activities, for children with special needs.

Vikram Sridhar grew up on stories of laddoos and curd rice. Once grown up, he decided to combine his varied pursuits of drama, rescuing monkeys and working with underprivileged children by becoming a storyteller.
